

BROTHERS(iatateken:a): YORK

Two seventeen year old boys, Atonwa, a young Mohawk warrior and Dan Booker the son of a British soldier, continue their adventures. They are best friends. Both are accomplished woodsmen, hunters and trackers. Recruited by the British Indian Department, the two boys experience the historic events of the war of 1812. The first book of the series introduced our fearless adventurers and follows them through the early months of 1813 from the first Battle of Fort George to the Battle of Beaverdams. The war continues, The American Army is content to stay at Fort George and Fort Niagara, and Atonwa and Dan follow their commander and mentor William Kerr to York. The capital of Upper Canada, has been attacked and sacked by the Americans leaving the city defenceless. It is also a hotbed of spies and a population with mixed loyalties, including American sympathisers. Born and raised in the forests of Canada, Atonwa and Dan must now learn to hunt and trap in a new type of jungle, the urban jungle, which requires new skills and a new brand of cunning. In the midst of this experiences they meet the people of North Americas history, some well-known and some not so well known. This is a story about history, adventure and the bond between brothers (iatateken:a).
